

New UK partner for world's second oldest executive search firm

Snowdon Tate proudly announces that, as of October 2011, it has joined Signium International as the firm's UK partner, reinforcing Snowdon Tate's ability to continue to build its capability to deliver around the world. Signium was established on the principle of 'Success through Quality' as a spin-off from McKinsey more than 60 years ago and was a founding member of the industry's global representative body, the AESC (the Association of Executive Search Consultants).

"As the number of international executive searches we are managing has more than trebled over the last two years it made perfect sense for us to join Signium International, giving us world-class capability across all international markets. Culturally and professionally Signium is a great fit for us, accelerating our capability to meet the needs of our clients who are increasingly looking for international solutions to both their domestic and global search assignments." David Sneesby, Managing Partner of Snowdon Tate Executive Search.

About Snowdon Tate Limited

Founded in 2004, Snowdon Tate now occupies a leading position in executive search within the UK market. Snowdon Tate's client base ranges from multi-national businesses to smaller local companies and the firm carries out executive searches for board appointments and senior managers across all functional disciplines. As well as handling UK assignments Snowdon Tate is increasingly working on international mandates as the UK arm of Signium International.
